Giving Away His Money At $25,000 A Day Rate

NEW YORK, June 8.—Mrs. Russell Sage since her husband's death has been giving away money at the rate of $25,000 a day, and she is still at it.

Already her benefactions have amounted to more than $25,000,000, an average of more than $8,000,000 a year since the huge Sage fortune of $65,000,000 came into her possession.

Recently it has been rumored that Mrs. Sage was considering a plan of workingmen's insurance with a view to endowing a fund for that purpose. This seems to be a mistake, although a careful investigation of such insurance as it is conducted in some parts of Europe has been made by her agents, under the supervision of the Russell Sage Foundation.

It has been estimated that when Russell Sage died he left something like $3500 for every day he had lived. Mrs. Sage is dissipating his accumulations so rapidly that within a little more than five years, if she does not call a halt on her revenues, there will be nothing left of the contents of that strong box which was always responsive to Wall Street's demand for ready cash—the security being approved.

When Mrs. Sage, after the death of her husband, set about distributing her wealth the causes of education and religion and the amelioration of human misery appealed most strongly to her. To educational institutions she has recently given nearly $5,000,000, to religious work something like $2,500,000, to the Sage Foundation $10,000,000, while the remainder has gone to works of a semireligious and educational character. Mrs. Sage has tried to place her money where it would do the greatest good to the greatest number.

In its work for the past two years the Foundation has provided the means whereby an educational campaign on the prevention of tuberculosis was carried on throughout New York State, with the result that over $1,000,000 has been appropriated by municipalities, individuals and counties for tuberculosis hospitals and dispensaries.

The Foundation contributed largely to the movement for children's playgrounds, with the result that 175 playgrounds have been projected, either under municipal or private management. It has investigated the placing out of children in institutions and secured notable improvements. It has also been supporting the work of a special committee directed particularly to the prevention of blindness in children.

The recent purchase by the Foundation of some 50 acres of land near Jamaica, L. I., is a project for the housing of working classes earning from $1000 to $2500 a year.

BOYCOTT COWARDLY AND UNAMERICAN

SCRANTON, Pa., June 8.—Judge George Gray, of the United States Circuit Court, sitting here as chairman of a board of arbitrators in the claims of employees against the Scranton Railway Company, on hearing a suggestion today of a boycott because certain business men had withheld certifying to lists of cost of living submitted by the company, denounced the boycott. He said:

"I thought that cowardly practice had gone out. It is seven years since I heard talk of that around here. The boycott is cowardly, un-American, utterly indefensible, and no man can defend it. There is no man dare stand up and face me and defend it. If there is a man afraid of it, let me know. We will proclaim it through the country to the discredit of Scranton."

"I am very much in favor of labor unions, but nothing has reacted so much to their discredit as that miserable un-American cowardly system of boycotting. I would rather die in my tracks than submit to it."

Attorney Powell, for the employees, asserted that the boycott did not exist, and Attorney O'Malley, for the company, agreed with Judge Gray's remarks.
